Is there a single keyboard which would allow me to reproduce their sound? pdf I would be really grateful for your thoughts What I would really like to do is spend a couple of years getting to grips with the music of Pink Floyd.

In the 90's PF covered the non-organ sounds with the Kurzweil K2000/K2500/K2600 models.. It has some decent Floyd-esque sounds to it and I've already gotten quite a bit of mileage out of it.. According to, Wright used Kurzweil after 1987 to cover the bases other than piano and Hammond organ, so that would be a good starting point. Free Wwe 2k16

Feb 27, 2018 - Pink Floyd Patch Kurzweil 1000 Hi I am new to this forum and new to the world of Workstations and Arranger keyboards.. #2527880 - 09/16/13 10:26 AM Re: Pink Floyd - Which Keyboard? I think there are a couple of threads around here which weigh the pros and cons of some of the newer controllers and VSTs available.. I think it would be a considerable challenge to reproduce the feel of Wright's tapestry of sounds with a single keyboardist in a live setting; let alone a single keyboard.. As mentioned already many of the analog synth sounds are included in the newest Kurzweil PC3 series as Kurzweil's VA-1 synth model (never formally released) is included in the PC3 series keyboard. The PC3 can do all of these The biggest limitation with a single keyboard is that you'll want hammer-action (aka fully weighted) for piano and Rhodes, unweighted for the others.. I have had a Yamaha Clavinova for the last 15 years but would now like to spread my electronic wings.. If you check the 'Pulse' video you see that both Jon Carin and Ricky Wright used them and Ricky also used a Kurzweil to cover the digital acoustic piano in the video (perhaps just as a controller, not completely sure).. The main bases to cover are: Hammond organ piano Moog synthesizer (mostly monophonic, but often multi-tracked in the studio) Mellotron With a smattering of polysynth (in later stuff), Rhodes, Farfisa, and Clavinet.. I'm not sure what sort of a budget you have to work with, but I would argue that a used Nord might be a good start for the organ and pianos, along with a smaller board dedicated for synth to cover some of the other 'stuff and things'.. Most of us don't feel that 'semi-weighted' is a good compromise, so we have two keyboards even if all the sounds are coming from one of them..
